An Art Factory.

Yesterday a representative of the Free Press met a young man who has been finding a somewhat precarious ex-istence by trying to stick to high art and conscientious work, and as the artist's face was wreathed in smiles the reporter asked:

"What's up? Have you struck a thousand-dollar commission?"

"Not exactly, but I've got a job where I am sure of three dollars a day, and it

I am sure of three dollars a day, and it is in the line of painting."

Accepting an invitation to come and see, the reporter followed his friend around the corner and up two flights of stairs to the top floor of a building near the center of the city. The spartment which they entered was about twenty feet wide by sixty feet, in length, having two sky-lights and six windows on the street front. Along the same side of the room were benches—paint benches with paint grinding mills, bits of sandpaper, pound brushes, sash tools, keep of paint, and the like, just as one might expect to find in the paint shops of a expect to find in the paint shops of wagon factory.

"Isn't this high art?" asked the artist, as he began pulling on a pair of paint-stained overalls, at the same time pointing to a panoramic nightmare which developed itself on the opposite wall.

"The panorama basn't been put on rollers yet, has it?" asked the reporter. "It isn't a panorama at all," was the artist's answer, at which he invited his

The "thing" was, perhaps, twenty feet in length by two feet in width, and was tacked tightly on the board partition and above it was tacked an almost exact duplicate. There was almost every style of land, water and winter-scape on the strips of cloth. First came a rough coast scene with a light-house and a wreck, which then changed to a woodland with a lake in the middle dis-tance, and the ruins of a castle and nountains in the distance. Then came nastoral scene with a country road. look of sheep and a good bit of foliage in the right foreground, and so the strip changed its aspect with a sort of kaleidoscopic readiness, every two er three

"What is it, anyhow" asked the visitor.

"It's a lot of cheap oil paintings. We paint 'em in the lump and cut 'em up according to needs. We make panels and large and small scenes by the rod, and let the frame makers say how large each single section shall be."

"And have you come to this?"

"Why not? I work about eight hours a day, and about as I please. I make a good living and can quit when I get enough to pay for a summer sketching trip. That's what I'm working for."

"But you'll get bad habits"
"What, painting this kind of stuff? Not a bit of it. Now just watch me," at which the artist began putting in a sky with a pound brush loaded with blue. It was like painting the elde of a barn, and as he worked, the artist explained how most of the work was done with large brushes, and how he could 'knock out' from filteen to twenty oil paintings a day. "And what do they sell for and where?"

"They sell in auction stores, chear furniture stores and are sometimes sold by canvassers. They bring from $2 to $5 each, framed." "lathis all you do?"

"No, I work about two days in the week painting window shades—those gorgeous fruit pleces and flower designs so often seen.

"And you like the work?" "I like to eat and have a good place to sleep.''

"That's so."—Detroit Free Press.

MIXED WITH A LITTLE BUSINESS,

"Art thou well, my brother?" often conceals the knife that only wants the chance to kill. Treachery may win a cheap success in politics, as well as Fraud, Humbug and Misrepresentations

As a rule, the public suffers financially from the effects of Frands and Misrepresentations, but the lesson so dearly paid for, benefits the legitimate dealer in the end, as honesty and integrity are the only safeguards of a permanent success.

When the Fire is extinguished, the Smoke blown off, the Water evaporated, and nothing but Wind remains, there will be fragments strewn all over the ground that will remind a great many how badly they were fooled. It matters not to what extent Fire, Smoke and Water will be

The Decatur Club. The smappel meeting of the 100 stock holders of the Decatur Business and locial Club was held in the rooms in the Hawarin Block last evening, when the manual reports were presented and placed on file. The club is in a healthy financial condition, having about $400 in the treasrry, and no indebtedness. The proposition to mcrease the annual dues from $12 a year, was voted flown by a close vote, as was also the proposition to increase the shares to 150. The resolution to increase the shares 30 in number, was adopted The shares are held at $30 each, and as all of the 100 are taken there is now a chance to increase the membership to 130, the direc tors having the power to receive or rejecapplicants.

The annual election of officers was held and the voting was lively. Those voted for president were Messrs. Jno. K. Warren, C. A. Ewing and J. R. Mosser Neither of these gentlemen received a majority of all the votes cast, and consequently there was no election for presiient. John Ullrich was elected vice president; Jno. K. Warren, secretary, and Wm. M. Boyd, treasurer. Only four of the six directors were elected. They were Mesers. K. Harwood, George E. Morehouse, F. L. Hays and W. R. Abbott. Two others and a president will have to be chosen at an adjourned meeting of the club next Saturday night.

Hiatt's Examination. A Decatur party who is interested: the tune of $200 in the whereabouts of James M. Histt, the alleged bigamist, has received a letter from this celebrated individual. It is dated Pontiac, where Histi is at present anchored as a guest of the sheriff of Livingston county. Saturday Hiatt will have a preliminary hearing before a justice of the peace on a charge of perjury, and Mrs. Hiatt No. 1 will be there to tell her story. Hight writes that he is quite confident of acquittal, and essures the Decatur man that he will pertainly be in this city on June 2d. He sends his kindest regards to all his Decatur friends, particularly his bondsmen As to the little flurry Sunday night, Hiatt writes that he simply went into the county to get valuable papers, and that he for the summer, to be opened again in returned promptly in a rainstorm. 1879—"Wooden Wedding"—1884. The fifth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. S. Davis May, was very pleasantly celebrated last night, at their home on West Main street, about seventy invited neighbors and friends participating in the enjoyment of the occasion. The host and hostess were assisted in doing the honors of the evening by Miss Helen Moore, and vocal entertainment was given by Miss Alice Freeman, of Decatur, and Miss Jessie Goff, of Chicago. The couple were presented with a great variety of appropriate gitts, and all partook of a bountiful repast. It was not intil a late hour that the gue ed farewells, wishing Mr. and Mrs. May many happy returns of wedding anniverearies. Another Easy Victim. Dexter Bartlett, a middle-aged and apparantly quick-witted farm hand, hailing from Michigan, arrived in Decatur last Regt. Hi. Int'ty. evening from Cliuton, with about $40 in his possession. He was bound for St. Louis, seeking employment, and he had a large-sized satchel with him. Near the depot he fell in with a stranger who stated that his home was in St. Louis and that he wanted a teamster. Bartlett got the job, and the men parted with the inderstanding that they would meet at 7 clock at the postoffice. They met, and the sharper then played the express trick on Bartlett and euchered him out of $25 on Bartiett and ethologous in each in each, making good his escape. In exchange for the each Bartlett was given a worthless draft for $500 to hold as security, and after waiting in vain for the return of the sharper Bartlett realized that he had been swindled, and he started out on the hunt of officers to run down the scoundrel. He found Captain Hewes to whom he related the circumstances of the confidence game, and the officer at once took the case in hand, being assisted by Constable Weitsel. Bartlett was sent off to the Hotel Brunswick and told to go o bed. No arrests.

to be the wife or mother of an Emperor But this woman has had the remarkable But this womth has had the remarkable experience of being the mother of three rulers and the wife of the fourth; and that, too, in a country where the ruler is the most absolute despot in the world. For twenty years had has been before the Turkish public as a splendid, figure head on state occasions, and for twenty years behind the seenes she has seen or had a part in a succession of horrors, that no one but an extraordinary woman. family was of good rank, and when ye young she became the first or princip wife of the great Sultan Mahmoud After Mahmoud's death, Abdul At the eldest of her three (sons,) came the the theorem and then the greatest of the sons, came the theorem and then the greatest of the sons, came the sons, came the sons, came the standard or the sons, came the sons or the sons Turkish royal houses being not from father to son, but from eldest member father to son, but from eldest member of the house to eldest member—she saw him followed-by Murad Effendi, her second son, and later by Abdul Hammed, hor third, who now, occupies the throne.

Abdul Aziz never troubled himself with anything more onerous than the duties of his harem. He was hardly the beau ideal of a bultan as regarded breadth but in one point he was traited.

the boad ideal of a Suttan as regarded breadth, but in one point he was truly royal. He could spend more money in less time than any Sultan that ever sat on the thrown. His father, Mahmoud, had worried along in his personal and household expenses on $500,000 a year. his reign his civil list was over $10,000, 000, and even then he could not keep out of debt. He did not spend it all; h out of deep. He do not spend traif; he could not. But what was laft over he resolved into a private fund, which he salted down beside him in the palace against a rainy day. Aside from these personal expenditures, out of the public funds he built palaces all along the Rambonia honests ame million arable. of improved arms in America for this soldiers, built and equipped a lat fleet of unwieldy rams and gun, boots and planned no end, of mosques magnificent public buildings.

He had a dry way of calling for Treasurer after breakfast and telling him that he expected a contain sum of money by noon, and if he did not have the money by that time he would have the Treasurer himself, which was a great incentive to action. But after he had sonally, the office somehow seemed go out of fashion. The grandeur, w too lonesome and the courtiers to whon it was proffered one and all declined. Suicide, they said, was just as quick kind Suicide, they said, was just as quick and had not half the worry. It was at this juncture that the Sultan hit upon a foreigner, an Englishman, for the office, who, in turn, having hit upon a yelan for filling it, accepted the p with great complacency. Up to time. Turky had never had a national debt. This man nego-tiated a loan with France, which so delighted the Sultan that he wanted to cut off the heads of all the former tr urers yet alive because they had not made him think of it before. And matters went on smoothly for awlide till at length a time came when nothing more could be borrowed on national credit, the country was exhausted, and worse than all, the army was unpaid and fast becoming mutinous. The and fast becoming mutinous ministry were somewhat in a box. they ventured to speak to the Sultan they were sure of being hanged; if they did not, and things went on as the were, they knew that the soldiers would rise and kill them anyhow. They had their choice, and they took it. It was determined to strike at the Sultan dimself... Whether the Sultan Abdul. Azis was really murdered or simply died by his own hand was, perhaps, only known to the mother of the Sultan, who had just died. 'She always asserted that he committed suicide; but, in the face of later facts, there, is no one in Turke but believes that he fell by the hands his ministers. His removal brough th present Sultan, his younger brother, the throne, and the ministers have I comparatively peaceful lives.—Constan-tinople Cor. London Telegraph.
